New Findings from Site Visit	Comments
419-400-0230(2) Adhere to and comply with all policies and procedures of the licensee and ensures that employees and volunteers comply with policies and procedures	Concerns were noted that Madrona Recovery was not meeting minimum staffing requirements that the program has established to comply with OHA rule requirements. Multiple staff reported that the program is routinely out of compliance with staffing levels.

Interview Summary
3 staff and 3 youth were interviewed as a part of the unannounced site visit. All 3 interviewed youth reported feeling safe in the program, reported liking staff and feeling like they could approach them for support. 2 of the interviewed youth reported being at similar programs previously in other states and stated that Madrona Recovery was better than other locations they had been to. 2 of the 3 clients reported that the food was excellent, and 1 wished that there was more variety (and specifically wished for Carne Asada on the menu). The clients were able to name specific staff they preferred and trusted to reach out to, including Kennedy, Karli, Brittany, Taylor, Cici, May and Tashe. Clients all reported being aware of the discharge planning for their case and being able to make phone calls privately. One client reported a concern about an incident that had occurred approximately 2 weeks prior between a staff and a youth that resulted in a physical altercation. This concern was forwarded to Madrona staff who were able to find documentation about the report and called the report in for screening and investigation. 3 staff were also interviewed as a part of the review process. Staff were consistent in feeling like their supervisors supported them, and one staff specifically mention the new Executive Director, Paul, had been a great addition to the program. All 3 staff separately noted concerns about staffing levels and having to meet required ratios. Reports indicated that ratios were out of compliance at least twice a week if not more, and one staff reported that they had been supervising 6-7 clients alone from 7am to approximately 830am. Interviewed staff indicated that both nurses and managers are being used to cover floor staff requirements, and that nurses are then not able to complete their nursing duties. It was additionally reported that managers will just stay in the fishbowl and not assist with floor duties despite being counted towards ratios. Interviewed staff also reported clients are not being held accountable for their behaviors, and one staff characterized the clients being able to do anything they want and the clients are “running the show.” Staff described clients being able to stay in bed all day if they wished as an example. Multiple staff reported feeling uncomfortable with CPI, restraints, and de-escalation training and knowing what to do. It was noted by one of the interviewed staff that there had been an intent for staff to practice CPI at the end of shifts, so that those hours could be counted towards certification, however the staff did not know if the CPI trainers would be conducting the training or if it would just be floor staff practicing together.

Two staff talked about the program utilizing a program called “Focus” for addressing client behaviors; however, neither staff was able to articulate what “Focus” was or how it was supposed to be implemented. Staff reported that training, both initial and ongoing, was unclear and unhelpful. One staff specifically reported not feeling like the suicide prevention training gave them the skills to address suicidal ideation. Another staff indicated that they wished that the program would better cover de-escalation training and removing glass from clients when its being used for self-harm. One staff indicated that some clients can be very difficult to work with to the point they are afraid to approach them.

One staff also noted concerns that management may be watching and listening in during the interview with OTIS staff. This licensor also heard from an OTIS Investigator with an open investigation at Madrona that they had learned from a different staff member that Madrona management had been observing OTIS investigation interviews through the camera system which allowed for audio and video observation.

Observations

The program appeared clean and in good repair. Bedrooms, bathrooms, and common areas were not cluttered and well organized.

CCLP followed up with Madrona management about the reported concern that OTIS interviews are being observed through the video system by management staff. Management noted that the Summit Room is where most interviews occur, and that the camera had been removed from the room. All OTIS interviews should be conducted in this room.

Recommendation:
It is recommended that Madrona Recovery management review the training process and work with staff to ensure they are informed and comfortable handling situations that may arise at the program. Additionally, its recommended that management work to ensure the “Focus” program is clear to staff in its purpose and function. Management staff have noted since the interview that the program has several trainings scheduled about the “Focus” program and its function and intent.
