Interview summary
Two youth were individually interviewed, ages 14 and 16, with approximate stays in the program of one week and one month. Both report feeling safe and described ways the program is helping them. The food is good and plentiful. Staff are trusting, they get medications as ordered, and peer relationships are going well with one describing it as a “good bond” of peers. Activities within the program and outings were described, and they shared what they’re working on in school. Youth are involved in their treatment plans, and they feel listened to. Communication with approved outside people occurs several times a week, in various formats (phone, virtually and in-person) and they are provided privacy while communicating with approved people. They report that program does well at supporting the youth, giving them hope, and state staff are flexible and do well at deescalating youth to avoid runaways. When asked if they could change anything about the program, one reported they wished they could have their personal cell phone.

Observations
The program director accompanied me on the walk-thru, and I also interacted with the operations manager and clinical supervisor. The environment is welcoming, in good condition, clean and within comfortable temperatures. The milieus are spacious with comfortable couches and video gaming machines as well as mounted TVs. All bedrooms, bathrooms, and shower rooms were observed, including the ADA room and bathroom. Other areas observed were the staff area and the classroom.
